VERA WANG: A SUCCESSFUL AMERICAN FASHION DESIGNER

4.1.

As a young girl, Vera Wang was passionate about figure skating. She competed professionally throughout her teens. Her ambition was to become a member of the USA national figure skating team and take part in the Olympics. Unfortunately, when she was 16, she failed to qualify for the Olympics. After this disappointment, Vera decided to stop skating.

4.2.

She began studying art history at Sara Lawrence College and spent her summers working at the Yves Saint Laurent store in her home city. One day at the store, she met a man who worked for Vogue – a famous fashion magazine. To her surprise, he invited her to work for the magazine as an assistant to the fashion director. Within a year, Wang was promoted and became one of the magazine's youngest ever senior fashion editors.

4.3.

In 1987, Vera Wang left Vogue to take a job as a design director at Ralph Lauren. A short time later, she began planning her wedding. Because she was unable to find a wedding dress that satisfied her, she designed one herself. This made her realize that she had the talent and passion necessary to become a professional dress designer. In 1990, Wang quit her job at Ralph Lauren and opened her own clothing boutique with the plan to design and sell her own collections.

eduarkusze.pl

4.4.

At first, her shop offered clothes only from well-known designers. Then, she gradually started adding her own designs. She first received international attention during the 1994 Winter Olympics. She had designed a costume that figure skater Nancy Kerrigan wore while skating. Soon, celebrities from many countries were wearing her dresses at various events and her designs were a popular topic of discussion on top TV shows.

WALK MORE, WAIT LESS

Some years ago, Houston airport received a large number of complaints from passengers who had to wait for their suitcases in the arrivals terminal. The airport administration made a careful analysis. They found that passengers spent just one minute walking from the arrival gate to the baggage pick-up area, and then seven minutes on average waiting for their bags. The airport administration moved the arrival gate further away, so passengers now have to walk six minutes instead of one, before they can pick up their luggage. Complaints have dropped to nearly zero since then. It seems that people prefer walking to just standing and waiting.

You won't believe what happened! Last Monday, on my return journey to New York, I had to spend almost 10 hours at Istanbul Airport. But I wasn't unhappy. Instead of just sitting there and getting bored I bought some souvenirs, tried some local Turkish dishes and relaxed at one of the airport cafés.
And guess what! While exploring the airport and its attractions, I came across an art gallery with an exhibition of 20 amazing portraits. They were not painted but made from recycled rubbish such as leaflets, tickets and plastic bags thrown away by passengers at Istanbul Airport.

I really loved this picture!

Tekst D

The First World War is over and Wally Shiers, an airplane mechanic, has promised his girlfriend, Helena, that he will return home and marry her. But fighter pilot Ross Smith asks Wally to join him to compete in a dangerous air race. A £10,000 prize has been offered for the first airmen to fly from England to Australia. Ross is a talented and brave pilot. Who could say "no" to his request? Wally writes to Helena to say he won't be home for another year.
The drama of that year is excitingly told by Lainie Anderson right from the first page. She uses real diaries and letters to describe one of the most important chapters in aviation history.

Przeczytaj wiadomość Michaela do Alice. Uzupełnij luki 5.4.–5.7. zgodnie z treścią tekstów A–D, tak aby jak najbardziej precyzyjnie oddać ich sens. Luki należy uzupełnić w języku angielskim.
Uwaga: w każdą lukę można wpisać maksymalnie trzy wyrazy.

Hi Alice,

I'm so happy that you are coming to Australia for your summer holiday. I'm looking forward to showing you round Sydney, my hometown.
If you want to save money on airline tickets, choose connecting flights instead of direct ones. I suggest going via Istanbul. The airport is truly amazing there. There is even 5.4. _____, where you can enjoy an exhibition of twenty fantastic portraits. The most unusual thing about the pictures is that the materials used to make them were collected at 5.5. _____ _____.
Another useful tip is to buy your tickets online a few weeks before you fly. I read that it's important not only what day of the week you actually fly, but also when you make the booking. To have a chance of getting the best price you should book your ticket on 5.6. _____.
Your journey will be a long one, so take a good book with you. I've recently read a wonderful historical novel. The main character, who worked during the war as 5.7. _____ _____, decides to take part in an air race from Europe to Australia while his girlfriend waits for him at home. It's a story full of romance and adventure. I'm sure you'll love it!
I can't wait to see you in Sydney!
Bye for now, Michael

“Can I help you, Miss?” – I heard a strong male voice behind me.
“I’m going up to deck A. Isn’t this the right way?” I replied. And then I added: “I’ve just received an invitation from Oona Sheehan to visit her in her first-class cabin.” I quickly showed him the message I had got from Oona. “Very good, Miss. Allow me to go with you,” the man said. He led me up to Oona’s cabin, knocked on the door and we entered. “If you please, madam, there’s a young lady to see you – her name is Molly Murphy.”
“How good of you to come, Molly,” Oona said.
“Miss Sheehan, why exactly did you invite me?” I asked a moment after the steward had left the cabin. “You hardly know me!”
Oona said: “Molly, I know that you are a lady detective, so you must be the kind of woman who likes a challenge and perhaps you would like to earn some extra money on this trip. I have a small proposition for you. It’s not always easy being me. I can never be alone, never have a chance to be myself. Even now, on this ship, in the middle of the ocean. People follow me like puppy dogs. It can become very tiring. I’m taking this trip home because my doctor has ordered me to slow down and rest. I would like some peace and quiet during the voyage.”
“You said you had a proposition for me,” I said.
“Yes. I want to change places with you on this voyage,” Oona said to my surprise.
“You want what?” I asked.
“Exactly what I said. For this voyage I want to become Molly Murphy, and I want you to stay in this cabin and become Oona Sheehan.”
“But that’s absurd,” I said.
“I’ve thought it all out. I’ll announce that I am feeling ill and I am staying in my cabin. If anyone knocks on the door and tries to talk to you, tell them that you have a terrible sore throat,” Oona said.
“Let me get this right. You’ll take my second-class cabin, down on E deck?” I asked.
“Yes. Say you’ll agree, and I’ll pay you straight away,” Oona said.
I thought for a moment. “I’ll do it,” I said.
She handed me a hundred dollars. Then she said: “Let’s exchange clothing and I’ll make my way down to E deck. And of course, feel free to use anything you like.” When we had switched clothes, she left. I stood in my new cabin, still feeling shocked. This was certainly the strangest thing which had ever happened to me. I was about to start a great adventure in my new role as Oona Sheehan. Then I heard someone knocking on my door.
“Come in,” I called, trying to sound like a famous actress with a sore throat. A pretty young woman entered the room and smiled politely.
“Good morning, Miss Murphy, I’m Rose, and Miss Sheehan has just asked me to look after you and give you whatever you need.”
I realized that it was going to be an unusual voyage.
