LITTLE-KNOWN FACTS ABOUT OLYMPIC MEDALS

4.1.
------	--

The modern Olympic Games have been held since 1896 but the first gold medals were given to athletes in 1904. Interestingly, both the gold and silver medals awarded at the Olympic Games nowadays are actually made of silver. The only difference between them is that in the gold medals the silver is hidden under a thin layer of gold. The bronze medals contain mainly copper and a very small amount of zinc.

4.2.

Other features of the medals have also changed over the years. For example, the first ones showed Zeus holding the goddess Nike. Then there was just Nike. Next there were two athletes. In 1928, Nike appeared again, with the Roman Colosseum in the background. In 2004, the Greeks protested against this background because the Colosseum was not the birthplace of the Olympics. Nowadays, Nike and the Greek Panathenaic Stadium are shown on Olympic medals.

4.3.
------	--

Some sports fans are willing to pay a lot of money for Olympic medals at auctions, especially if they have been won by famous sportspeople. The javelin thrower Maria Andrejczyk put her Tokyo 2020 silver medal up for auction to raise money for a seriously ill child. Anthony Ervin, who won gold at the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney, put the medal on eBay in 2004. He gave all the money he got for it to people who lost their homes in the Indian Ocean tsunami of that year.

4.4.
------	--

It is not only winning that counts in sport. At the 1988 Olympic Games, a Canadian sailor, Lawrence Lemieux, was in the lead in a boat race, but he stopped to help two other sailors who had fallen out of their boats into the rough sea. He didn't win the race but received a special medal for sportsmanship. His generous act showed the true spirit of the Olympics.

THE DAY EVERYTHING WENT WRONG

When I woke up I realized I was already late for school! I rushed to the bathroom, and then to the kitchen. I needed to have a quick breakfast, so I grabbed some milk and cereal. Then I got dressed quickly, picked up my school bag and ran to the bus stop. I was the only one there, and no bus came. I wondered why. On Fridays the buses run every 10 minutes.

I had to get to school, so I started walking as fast as I could. I looked behind me and saw a dog running after me. It was getting closer and closer and finally caught hold of my uniform with its teeth. I stood still, and fortunately it ran away.

I started to hurry. Along the way my bag suddenly became lighter. I realized I'd left the zip open, and my books had fallen out. I quickly picked them up. Finally, I got to the school building, but the doors were locked. I looked around and noticed Mr Gold, the school caretaker. I asked him why I couldn't go in. His answer was: "It's Saturday!" I sat on the school steps and laughed out loud.

For students For staff

At the University of Birmingham we care about cyclists and encourage all staff, students, and visitors to travel to the university by bike instead of by car or bus, if possible. The main campus is at the centre of a network of safe cycle routes which are many kilometres long. We can provide you with a map that shows where these routes are. Also, the university offers safe, comfortable cycle parking, and there are shower facilities available on campus.

Cycling is a great way to get around when studying at the University of Birmingham, and it helps you take care of the environment. If you do not have your own bike, you can hire one from us for £70 for the academic year.

I've noticed a huge increase in the number of school buses over the last few years. This makes no sense because we have the same number of schools we have always had. Nearly every neighbourhood has an elementary and secondary school within walking distance. Why then are so many children being transported to schools outside their neighbourhoods? All these buses create unnecessary pollution. No wonder many local residents have started to say that this should change.

Hi Paweł,

Do you know what happened to me last week? One day when I woke up, I thought it was 5.4. _____ and I was late for school, so I started to panic. Then a series of unexpected events happened while I was walking to school. You won't believe it but on the way 5.5. _____ in the street. It was scary because it almost bit me. And then I nearly lost all my books. It may seem strange to you, but in spite of this terrible day I have decided not to take the bus to school anymore. What's more, I'm going to encourage my friends to walk to school, too. I know that one of the schools in my area recently organized a 5.6. _____ to promote walking.

Now, I'm reading various articles and blog posts on the subject. I have learnt that there are a lot of people who don't like the idea of children going to school outside of their local area and having to 5.7. _____.

I wonder how school children in Poland usually get to school. Please, let me know.

Best wishes!

“Can I help you with anything, Max?” the sales assistant asked, reading my name printed on the hoodie I was wearing.

“Well,” I said, looking at the sweaters, “I need a present for my brother. Something nice that he will actually wear. And it mustn’t be too heavy, because I’m sending it overseas. It’s the first time he’s not going to be at home for Christmas.”

Soon I was shown a number of sweaters in different sizes and colours. I finally chose a plain blue one although the assistant suggested a red, blue and green one. And even though the sweater I bought was one of the most expensive sweaters in the shop, I was happy because I knew it would suit my brother and he’d love it. He was probably expecting something boring, like a pair of socks, so this sweater would be a nice surprise.

You should know that my brother Tom and I are not very similar. He is tall, blonde, quite slim, and athletic. I am none of those things. On the other hand, I am very open with people: if you ask me how I’m doing, you’ll learn all about my work, who I met the night before, and my latest hobby. My brother is a much more private person and the only thing he seems to like discussing with me are problems, whether his or mine. And one more thing... We talk using sentences from our favourite films. However strange it may seem to other people, we have been communicating this way for years!

OK, I admit it, I miss him and wish he wasn’t so far away. But I was the one who started that trend. A few years ago, I moved to Ireland after I finished my university education in Toronto, my hometown. As I knew no one in Dublin, I had to find an apartment and a job all by myself. Once I started working, I made some friends, but I just wasn’t able to fit in there. I got more and more homesick, so I was on Skype with my parents every week. Now, I’m back in Toronto and my little brother is across the Atlantic for the first time, going to a teacher-training college in Glasgow, Scotland. I know via Facebook he’s happy going sightseeing at weekends with his girlfriend, taking lots of pictures and hanging out with mates.

When I brought the sweater home, I talked to my father about taking it to the post office along with the other presents for Tom.

“Dad, how can we make it so he doesn’t know that the parcel’s full of Christmas presents?”

“Well, he’ll probably just open it when it arrives.”

“But that’s what I mean. Shouldn’t we write on it, ‘Do not open until the 25th’, or something?”

“He can open it whenever he wants, Max.”

“I don’t want him to know that the parcel contains Christmas presents when it arrives. He has to open it on Christmas Day, when he might be feeling a little bit lonely, and a little bit homesick. Then he’ll be really happy he has gifts from us.”

TUTANKHAMUN'S TOMB¹

In 1917, British archaeologist Howard Carter and the wealthy aristocrat, Lord Carnarvon, started searching for Pharaoh Tutankhamun's tomb in Egypt. Years passed without them making any progress and Carnarvon wanted to give up. But Carter asked him to keep going for a few more months. 7.1. ____ They tried to pick it up, but it did not move. They realized it was, in fact, a step. They continued digging and discovered more steps which led them to a doorway with a name over it: Tutankhamun.

But the explorers weren't sure if there would be anything valuable inside. Almost all the ancient tombs had been found and robbed. Also, the door in front of which they were standing showed signs of damage. 7.2. ____ Carter later wrote: "Details of the room showed up slowly in the dark – strange animals, statues, and lots of shiny gold ornaments."

The ancient Egyptians believed in life after death, so they put everything they thought that a pharaoh might need into the tomb with him. 7.3. ____ They also thought that the pharaoh would want his throne, statues, and jewellery, so they put them in the tomb as well.

It turned out that the tomb had been broken into at least twice. Luckily, the thieves hadn't taken much out of the tomb thanks to the guards who had protected it. Carter and Carnarvon spent over two months cataloguing more than 600 objects in the tomb. But there was no sign of Pharaoh Tutankhamun. So, they began looking around the tomb for a second door. 7.4. ____ Inside, there were three golden coffins and the mummy of Tutankhamun. Carter and Carnarvon's long search was finally over.

- A. But when they looked through a small hole in the door, they saw that the tomb was full of fascinating objects.
- B. Carnarvon agreed and just three days later they found a large flat stone in the sand.
- C. Unfortunately, most of the items had been broken into small pieces and it was hard to put them together.
- D. After some time, they found it and went in full of excitement, hoping that they would now discover the pharaoh himself.
- E. This included items like clothing, food, beds, and even games.
